Any discussion of the background art throughout the specification should in no way be considered as an admission that such background art is widely known or forms part of common general knowledge in the field. Historically, there has been increasing interest in the preservation and retrieval of the data that is created and stored on data processing systems. A data processing system may be defined as a device that processes and/or stores data, such as a computer system. Data processing systems may process data and use the processed data, and the processed data may be stored in a manner so that the data may be accessed and/or retrieved at a later time. Data processing systems may utilize a data processing system to manage the data stored on the data processing system. As an example, a data processing system may be used to store data into an event store. An event store is a persistent, time-based, database where data is stored in the form of events. Events are the smallest semantic unit in an event store. An event store may be implemented as a relational database, and data may be stored and processed through the event store. When an event occurs to the data stored on a data processing system, data may be stored into an event store to provide the data for processing. An event may be described as a record of activity that has occurred to data on a data processing system. Data which describes an event may be stored in the event store as attributes of the event store. The attributes of the event 3e33713323
