Gary Gray, may not match the stunning adrenaline rush of previous entries. But it is a...[Effects of fluvastatin on serum lipids and progression of coronary atherosclerotic plaque in diabetes mellitus: analysis of sequential changes in 93 patients]. To evaluate the effects of fluvastatin on serum lipids and progression of coronary atherosclerotic plaque in the patients with diabetes. Serum lipids were measured in 93 patients with diabetes mellitus and coronary atherosclerotic plaque before and after treatment with fluvastatin 20 mg per day. Serum total cholesterol and triglyceride and low density lipoprotein cholesterol were significantly decreased by fluvastatin after treatment. Serum apo AI and B were also significantly increased by treatment. The mean angiographic lumen narrowing score in 71 lesions was significantly decreased by fluvastatin after treatment. No significant changes occurred in serum lipids, lipoprotein electrophoresis and B-type natriuretic peptide between before and after treatment. There was a significant negative correlation between the changes in serum lipids and that of the stenosis. Patients with higher baseline serum triglyceride had the greater reduction of serum lipids by fluvastatin. Decrease of serum triglyceride after treatment with fluvastatin was positively correlated with the change in the lumen narrowing score of the coronary lesion. The change in lipid profile was closely associated with the progression of coronary atherosclerotic plaque in patients with diabetes.

Recommended Posts For being a free game many features are bugged, many NPC populations are way underpopulated, economy is bugged, game style is bugged, questing seems to have no real point (substantially it's the same as in FotH2), combat style is bugged (which is not so important). The only quest which looks like an actual point is the Largo-esque one on the Black Mountain
