Second. Third. Fourth. When I open it, I get the contents like this: First. Second. Third. Fourth. Note: The first word is just First, the rest are all lowercase. What I want to do is that the first word in every line of the file should be made capital. In this case, the first word of the file should become: First. Second. Third. Fourth. This is the code that I've been trying, but it didn't seem to do anything: `import sys def myFunction(): result = open("book.txt") lines = result.readlines() for line in lines: newLine = line.upper() sys.stdout.write(newLine) myFunction()` I know there are a lot of questions about how to make a first word capital in Python, but every answer that I've found on those questions didn't seem to work when I tried them. I'd like the solution to be in Python 3.7. A: Try this: `import sys import os def myFunction(): result = open("book.txt") lines = result.readlines() for line in lines: newLine = line.capitalize() sys.stdout.write(newLine) myFunction()` I made some modifications to your code: 1) the capitalize method of a string returns a string with all characters capitalized except for the first character 2) you need to call it
