Are people still using these tools? This file is signed with a key, so it's probably safe for me to say the file is legitimate. I want to try free software alternatives to this, but from what I have seen it looks like ArcView is all the free version offers. Since I am not that proficient in coding and would require some guidance, I am hoping I can find a free alternative. In case my description is not clear enough, I am not looking for a free, open source alternative to ArcView. The purpose of this question is to see if anyone has used, or is using free alternatives to this software. A: I don't know the software you're describing, but here are some free alternatives. The GIS toolchain at OpenGeo Suite is a good free alternative to ArcGIS (though, of course, it is not really a good alternative, like describing a camel as a horse). It is, however, a full-blown suite of GIS (ArcGIS/ArcMap, QGIS, etc). You could try using QGIS or any other GIS software for your specific problem. However, no tool or software exists to do everything -- you'll probably still have to write some scripts (e.g. automate the calculations). Main navigation What is a Real Estate Agent? There is a lot of misinformation about what a real estate agent does. Here's a quick synopsis... Real estate agents are who you will have to work with to sell your house. And, there are two types of agents in this world: The Seller's Agent and the Buyer's Agent. Seller's Agents – Agents whose clients are selling property They take a commission on the sale of the property – usually between 5 and 6%. This money is subtracted from the sales price and paid to the agent. You would have a Realtor on your side. Let them represent you in the sale of your home Here's what a Realtor does: Buyer's Agents – Agents whose clients are buying property They also take a commission of 5 to 6% on the sales price of the property. This is the cost of the agent you'll pay to find you a property you can afford and where you want to live. 3da54e8ca3
