The Rants and Raves of a (still) Crazy IT Consultant Ranting: I am going to rant. About love. A good, old fashioned rant. A number of years ago, I went to a Superbowl party with a business colleague. It was good to catch up with him and had been many years since we had last seen each other, but when the TV cameras were pointed to our table, I was thinking about all the people around us. We were all middle-aged, all fairly successful, some with families. If you look at the common denominator (if there is one), how well all of us were doing seemed a bit strange. At the time, I was married and on the way out of my marriage. This was a long, long time ago. I have been married a total of 3 times. I am 51 now. This was in the mid to late 1990s. I had been with a wife. I had been a widower. I was ready to move on, meet new people and enjoy life. The business colleague had been married and we talked about that. The only down side to his marriage was that his wife was an alcoholic. I asked him what he thought that was like. He said, "When you get married, you don't realize how much you miss alcohol until you don't drink." Then I understood the basis for the Superbowl party. Let me pause here for a moment to tell you that I have two grown children. Let me also tell you that I have been married twice, am currently married, have been a widower and am well on my way to being a widower again. The odd thing was that I was with this business colleague that day. I had never been to a Superbowl party with a group of men. There were a few females there, but I was to find out later that there was no immediate in-law connections e24f408de9
