In Nelson, it's 39 degrees. It's expected to rise to around 50 degrees in the afternoon before dropping back again tonight. Senior forecaster Ben Hulme said in his morning briefing that Thursday's peak was moving up the day as a result of a cold front from the Tasman moving north. "We're starting to see this cold front come up into the southern portions of the country, and that's really been bringing cloud cover down to the southern end of the country to cause it to be hotter tomorrow," Hulme said. "We saw the temperature peak about half an hour ago in Wellington and the rest of the country is moving up the day also." Nelson's early 20s morning low of 31 degrees is
