If you really don't want the temporary files in your computer, you can also use CCleaner. Its free and has many features, but I'm not sure if it supports a Win10 clean. A: Here is another free tool for this, especially if the "admin tools" will not be enough, I use: Windows Search Cleaner 1) run it 2) select the drives 3) select the folder you want to clean 4) click OK Or, for your question, select files in Explorer to clean up, right click on a file, select "Clean up file", and select the drive from the left pane. If you want to find the files that have been cleaned, you can find them in the program itself, or use the registry entries. The registry entries are in HKEY_CURRENT_USER\Software\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Explorer\FileCleanup\XXXXXX where XXXXX is the folder name.
