(AP) — Retired businesswoman Lori Lightfoot has become the first woman in a long line of Democratic mayoral contenders to file for the job, putting her in position to win the Nov. 5 general election. Lightfoot announced Wednesday that she had entered the contest to succeed term-limited Mayor James Baker at the City Hall in downtown Dover, Delaware. She joins six other men in the race, including former state Sen. Greg Brodeur and state Reps. Brian Mosby and William Lebeau. Lightfoot, of Gurnee, Illinois, said Delaware "shouldn't be stuck in an old-boy's club." She said the election's outcome will "fundamentally change" what Delaware is and how it operates. She was Baker's second-in-command, serving as the top deputy mayor since early 2015. She also served as the chairwoman of the Chicago Public Schools and the chairwoman of the Chicago Transit Authority. Lightfoot would be the first female mayor of the state's largest city, but other cities have had women mayors, including Portland, Maine, for more than 100 years. In Chicago, for example, Mayor Lori Lightfoot was the city's first female mayor. Other prominent women running for mayor include London Breed, who is running in San Francisco; Mary Ellen Smith, who is seeking the mayor's seat in Chicago; and Caroline Brewer, who is running in Austin, Texas.Q: Seeking guidance on my target server's status for OLAP I have a corporate Linux server dedicated as the OLAP server.
