The reaction time of the human ear to auditory clicks has been investigated using an apparatus where the target is located 1 m in front of the tympanic membrane and the electrocardiogram is recorded simultaneously. The same apparatus was used to investigate the reaction time of the ear to click-alone stimuli. The normal response latency for the ear to a click in the 3000 to 4000 Hz range was 1.21 +/- 0.17 ms. This is slower than the latency of 0.81 +/- 0.10 ms of the ear to a click alone. The response latencies of the ear are probably due to the lag of the brain to the impulse transmitted via the acoustic nerves.Ken, What do you think about adding "building" and "schedule" in their corresponding field to the risk book pages ca3bfb1094
