The Mortgage Bankers Association says that the number of application for purchase mortgages — made by homebuyers looking to buy a house — fell 11.3 percent in May to $19.5 billion, marking the lowest level in the data's history. An index of purchase applications fell to 83.8 in May from 89.8 in April, with the refinance index falling to 12.3, a more than five-year low. The purchase application index had been down 11.6 percent from the April reading, while the refinance index had been down at 14.5 percent. "People who had bought in the early part of the housing recovery have been either waiting for more favorable prices or they have gotten worried about the perception of the economy," Ann Ranney, MBA's chief economist, said in a statement.
