Q: Why should I use an FTP/SFTP service? I'm currently hosting my website using free webhosting services, and haven't figured out why I should move to an FTP/SFTP service. I have read this question, and I did some Googling but I just can't grasp what the advantage of a paid webhosting service over free one would be. A: FTP Server is best provided by a webhost, as it must have access to a web server. The advantage of using a web host, is that they will provide a web interface, and allow you to make configuration changes with relative ease. The disadvantage is that the server is yours and you are responsible for maintaining and securing it. SFTP is often provided by a web host. This allows you to login to the ftp server directly through the web interface. Here is an article on the advantages and disadvantages of web based vs ftp. The present invention relates to a loose-leaf folder sheet stacking device for accumulating the loose-leaf sheets, which are discharged by a printer as a result of printing on the front surface of the sheets, on a sheet stacker to be accumulated on the paper feed tray of the printer. In general, there has been put to practical use a function, by which a device is provided between an image forming apparatus such as a printer and a paper feed tray, which is open in a direction in which sheets are fed from the paper feed tray, such that the sheet is dropped onto the tray before printing, while the sheets having been printed by the printer are aligned on the tray to be discharged from the tray, by the feeding of the sheets from the tray. More specifically, the back surface of the printed sheet, which is printed to adhere to the sheet stacker, is faced upward, and is dropped on the tray by the lift of the sheets. Thereafter, the printed sheets, which have been thus dropped, are removed from the tray by the lift action of the tray. The printer is provided with a conveying path in which the printed sheets are introduced and then discharged while being conveyed along the conveying path, and is connected to a paper receiving tray to which the printed sheets are discharged by the lift action of the tray. In a second prior art, a loose-leaf paper feeder is mounted at the end of the paper conveying path to remove the printed sheets from the tray. In the first

The role of T-cell cytokines in fibrotic remodeling of the aortic valve. The pathology of calcific aortic valve disease (CAVD) includes fibrosis, inflammation and calcification. We previously demonstrated that bone marrow derived monocytes/macrophages, via their production of receptor activator of nuclear factor  $\kappa$ B ligand (RANKL) and macrophage colony stimulating factor (M-CSF), play a pivotal role in CAVD calcification. Here, we hypothesize that this pathogenic paradigm may be extended to other cell types involved in remodeling of the valve, namely vascular endothelial cells and lymphocytes. We used an acute porcine decellularized valve model to explore the role of the lymphoid cytokines IL-2, IL-6, IL-17 and TNF- $\alpha$  in the vascular component of valve disease. We first investigated whether valve endothelium may release cytokines in vitro that could induce vascular calcification. Using organ culture of decellularized aortic valve leaflets, we found that IL-6, IL-17, TNF- $\alpha$ , IL-2 and M-CSF could be released by this endothelial cell population. We next performed in vivo experiments to study the effect of these cytokines on vascular calcification in an aortic valve interstitial leaflet. The results showed that circulating IL-2, IL-6, IL-17 and TNF- $\alpha$ , but not IL-2, were associated with calcification. The effect of IL-2 and IL-6 was mediated by the tumour necrosis factor receptor superfamily member TNFRSF1A (TNFRSF1A) and TNFRSF25 (Fas) respectively, as local delivery of antagonists of these receptors resulted in reduced calcification. We conclude that lymphoid cytokines are released by valve endothelium, and through the action of their receptor complexes they contribute to vascular calcification by stimulating osteoblastic factors in osteo-chondrocytes.
