By Gabriel Li on 2013-03-11 22:13 [Re-dock] Last updated on 2013-03-11 22:13 This has been a long time coming and it has been a very busy time. For the most part I think I have done my best to keep you all up to date, but with that said I have done a lot of work and a lot of research, for which I thank you all for your continued support. US Cities X: Las Vegas, released in October 2012 for the Xbox One, is the first DLC that I have ever released for Steam. This is not a typical retail release but a private release from myself, the developer of the scenery. All of the money I have earned from this release has been invested into researching and developing this add-on. At the time of the Xbox release, I had just started working on the project and had only built very basic models for the Grand Canyon, Las Vegas strip and Area 51. I also had not been to Las Vegas myself and I didn't understand the historical, cultural or political background of the city as well as I do now. Given the poor reception that the Xbox One version had, I decided to do a massive rewrite of the entire project and I spent the next 6 months just focused on rewriting and recreating the entire project from the ground up. This culminated in the release of a brand new set of scenery assets for both FSX and Prepar3D that are similar to what has come before but they are also built from the ground up. The visuals are greatly improved, the models are more detailed, the textures are high resolution and the detail and quality is much higher than anything that I have done before. I also tried to make everything as accurate as possible to the current version of the software being used and what was used when I created the assets. The result is a level of visual detail, fidelity and accuracy never seen in a Las Vegas related product and there is now an industry standard for 3D flight simulation related products. For Steam, I decided to make the game as universal as possible. Many people wanted this as it would have been more cost effective, but I have tried to keep the price as low as possible to get more people on board. While the project has been massively expanded over what was originally presented, I decided to keep the base price the same as the Xbox One release. I have made it a no risk purchase and I'm not expecting a huge sales rush

Vietnam '65: A Living History Veteran Conflict Interactive Theme Build a Nation New Game Features: User Interface Improved Game Mechanics New Campaign: Nam Du New Scenarios: Duckspin Southwest Northwest The 1963-1973 period was one of great upheaval throughout the world. The end of the brutal Vietnam War escalated a nation that rose up against a centralized government and desired freedom from dictatorial control. The Social Revolution and the subsequent rise of Solidarity in Poland and Lebanon were felt in the United States, and United States involvement in the Middle East led to the American Involvement in Vietnam. The Vietnamese government and military fought with American aid against the Vietnam National Liberation Front, the Viet Cong and the NVA, but American counter-insurgency strategies often led to the indiscriminate killing of civilians or a heavy reliance on the use of technology that many found inhumane. Vietnam, however, was a true melting pot, and communities between all races and religions inhabited one another. In the United States,

Americans from all walks of life assimilated into Vietnamese culture and Vietnamese culture into American culture. The media, both Eastern and Western, tended to draw distinctions based on both historical and cultural memories. At a time when most Americans were seeking to find themselves in a cultural revolution, America was yet again marching into Vietnam. Historical Analysis Vietnam's colonial history had progressed quite well by the early 1950's. Following the August Revolution, independence from France was established in 1954. There was a great deal of controversy over political and military independence. In 1959, Vietnam's relations with the Soviet Union grew increasingly strained and by 1962, the USSR began encouraging the North Vietnamese to organize a revolt. This alarmed the United States and the United Kingdom. American authorities went through the motions of assisting Ho Chi Minh's government, but secretly financed armed groups. The American military presence in Vietnam was very clandestine and in 1964, there were only 50,000 American troops there. The United States government was worried about its citizens dying and becoming prisoners, and public opinion began to differ with the Army on the use of Agent Orange in Vietnam. In September 1965, President Johnson called for what would later be known as the American War in Vietnam, publicly declaring that the soldiers had an obligation to
