Main quests . Automatic counting and grading of retinal photographs. A computer program was developed to automatically count and grade retinal photographs. The program was written in FORTRAN IV and was run on a Hologic-25 mainframe computer. The program has been tested on 2644 photographs taken in two settings. The overall correlation for the two readers for identifying the lesions and grading the photographs were 99.7% and 96.8% respectively. It was found that using a larger field of view for evaluation increased the percentage of photographs being graded. As our field of vision diminishes with age, it is extremely important to be able to examine large areas of the retina. The results of this study show that the computer program will assist in the diagnosis and grading of retinal photographs.Q: Using R. Are there online sources available for capitalisation rules? There is a lot of information out there on the rules for using different people's names and words capitalised, but I find it difficult to find sources for rules for capitalisation of words in themselves. For instance, the word "the", does it always require a capital letter? Such as "The speed of light is the
