Molecular cloning and sequence analysis of human pseudorabies virus gene encoding the nuclear inclusion protein. The nucleotide sequence of a DNA region that contains the first open reading frame (ORF) of the human pathogenic alphaherpesvirus, human pseudorabies virus (PRV), was determined. This region was found to contain two ORFs. Sequence analysis of these two ORFs revealed the presence of a putative open reading frame (ORF 73) which overlaps by 14 nucleotides with ORF 71. Translation of the latter ORF yields the protein of 483 amino acid residues, which is designated the nuclear inclusion protein (Nip). The N gene has been reported to code for a protein containing two zinc finger motifs. Four highly conserved regions, containing six cysteine residues, were identified within the coding region of Nip.
