Many surgeons prefer placement of the tibial tunnel using the tibial tubercle as a reference for the intended tunnel position. However, even for experienced arthroscopic surgeons, posterior placement of the tunnels has been reported to be difficult using this method. We present a novel technique for creating two posterior tunnels from the tibial tubercle or the posterior cortex using a device introduced through a 4.0-mm arthroscope portal. An update of the work on the biodegradation of petrochemicals and related compounds by Fusarium species using gas chromatography and liquid chromatography-mass spectrometry as a supplementary method. Petroleum hydrocarbons are resistant to biological degradation. The enzymes involved in their biodegradation are produced by microorganisms capable of degrading them in the hydrocarbon phase. Among the microorganisms able to degrade petrochemicals, Fusarium species play a role as biocatalysts of great biotechnological interest. The objective of this work was to study the biodegradation of industrial petroleum hydrocarbon mixtures by Fusarium species using gas chromatography-mass spectrometry (GC-MS) and liquid chromatography-mass spectrometry (LC-MS).
