Amazon.com: Ricoh Aficio MP 6001.Q: How do I use a full-width class within a smaller class? I am trying to use a grid within a page which uses a full width container. I am using an image slider as well. All the images are getting squashed in each row of the larger container and I think this is because of the smaller width of the container. I want to break the container into two columns, using the container class as a div wrapper. But if the container gets too small then it doesn't work properly. I need to figure out how to stop the images from breaking into each other and get displayed in two separate columns. Some of my code: Title 6d1f23a050
