Access to maternity services and preterm birth at the Canadian Coast Guard base in San Juan, Puerto Rico. The objectives of this study were to explore 1) access to health services by women working at the Canadian Coast Guard (CCG) Base in San Juan, Puerto Rico (PR) and 2) the extent to which women were exposed to the deleterious effects of smoking and illicit drug use during pregnancy. Women exposed to abortion-related procedures were excluded because they are a subgroup who often have barriers to accessing health care. Women working at the CCG base who became pregnant (N = 185) were interviewed, and singleton live births from 2000 to 2009 were extracted from the electronic medical records of the CCG base to determine if they met criteria for preterm birth (PTB). One-fifth of the women interviewed had been pregnant before, and one-third were pregnant when the interviews took place, with the remainder being pregnant for the first time during the interviews. Respondents to the interviews were more likely to have private insurance, to have high income, and to have a partner who was better educated than the women who were not interviewed. Although only 3.1% of the women interviewed had a PTB, the rate for white women was more than twice the national average. Women who reported exposure to secondhand smoke and/or drugs in the workplace were about twice as likely to have a PTB as those who did not report such exposure. Although the study cannot establish causation, these findings suggest that access to health care is an important predictor of PTB.

Further research is needed to understand the barriers pregnant women working at the CCG base encounter accessing health services and to understand how illegal drugs and secondhand smoke affect pregnancy outcomes. Q: How to find the number of possible sequences of  $n$  consecutive pairs? For example, if  $n=3$  and  $X = \{ "AA", "BA", "CA", "AA", "AC", "CA", "BA" \}$  The total number of possible sequences is  $|X| = 7$  A:

Observe that the sequence  $(X_n)_{\{n \in \mathbb{N}\}}$  where  $X_n = \{n-1, n-2, \dots, 1\}$  is
