now, in order for your data file to be used and loaded into your x-plane 11. the navigraph airac data must be replaced with the corresponding data file. when replacing the navigraph airac data with your own data, please note that x-plane 11 allows for limited exceptions to the user data protocol. the following exceptions are usable. if you are using x-plane10, please do not update, and leave the previous files alone (or uninstall and reinstall x-plane 10 if in.zip format) 1. change the aircraft type in the fmc from any of the following: erm300, acara, abd air, uaserm (which in x-plane 10 was the erm300 just renamed), ffsa, or erm200 (note: this one is not for use in x-plane 10). 2. try to make changes to one of the following: default fmc or other gfsw or wgfsw "lint" settings to another gfsw, fsm, wsm (numbers). 3. make any of the following changes in the ggff file. [fs9 fsx p3d x-plane] navigraph airac cycle 1703 game download when the map data (.gff) is exchanged, the following occur. the valid/existing navigraph data is replaced with the.gff file. this is done in the default methods of x-plane, and requires no additional action. x-plane 11 assigns the following file extensions to the various data types: 1..ga - ground attribute/note 2.gsl - ground static lighting/panels 3.gps - ground position static 4.gds - ground dynamic 5.lid - location description (not avalible in x-plane 10.04 or earlier) the last time i used navigraph, it was using their airac cycle 1801, so it is very possible that the cycle 1800 we have now, was released in between. so, you may want to try navigraph again to see if you get the latest update or you should be fine with what you have already.
