i have a problem with time zone settings in windows 10. sometimes my time zone is set to "central europe standard time" but the date and time are set to "central europe daylight time". i'm not an expert in windows, so i don't know if this is a known issue. but i'd like to see if anyone else is experiencing this problem. i have an issue with a windows 10 computer where the computer automatically restarts when i use the task manager to kill a process. "the process 'taskmgr' (nt authority\system) has terminated unexpectedly." it looks like windows is crashing, but there's nothing interesting in the system event log. it just shows that the process failed. i have been having a problem with the file history since the last update to windows 10. the problem occurred after installing kb3035583, and has continued to occur after installing other updates. now after a lengthy amount of time, the file history will start working for about 5 minutes and then stop and the icon will go away. when i get a file history notification it is giving me the "the requested action has been deleted." error. this also causes me to lose a week's worth of work in documents. i have a problem with a windows 10 computer where the computer automatically restarts when i use the task manager to kill a process. when a user is signed in on the device, and they open the start menu, select settings, and then select update & security, the user is redirected to the settings app. the settings app has no knowledge of windows update in the background. when i start my pc, the windows logo in the top left of the screen appears on the task bar, but the screen is black and no windows logo appears on the screen. if i press windows + r and type powrprof.cpl and then click on the button, i can find a message that says " power profile settings have been updated, but this device has not yet restarted. restart the device. ". i did not install any updates. what should i do? microsoft has been phoning in the quality of windows update lately. system update keeps rebooting after rebooting once. i can see the progress bars on the screen but it always resets and tells me that windows cannot be installed. i have tried reinstalling and repair with no luck. how can i fix this and roll back? i have a laptop with windows 10 pro (build 10.0.17134.10). every now and then the system restarts, and the message "windows cannot be installed on this device. windows could not be installed on this device because the device is currently in use". when this happens, i cannot boot

the system and am left with a black screen. i can however, turn off the machine and turn it back on (no restart required) and the system will be running normally again. however, this happens multiple times a day. i have recently upgraded from windows 7 to windows 10 and have encountered issues with my usb 3.0 port. i cannot connect a usb 3.0 hard drive to the port and the system does not recognize the drive as existing. how can i fix this? 5ec8ef588b
