The Mach3 is still the winning game in the battle of the $1 cartridge razors. My tester, Mike Joyce, was one of few who gave his 2009 winner, the Fusion, a top performance. The Mach3 is the same basic design. Its three blades are spaced more evenly than the two blades on the Fusion, its cartridges are still very easy to rinse, and the razor itself is comfortable to use. (critique)Review: SmartShave.TV/SmartShave Shaver FormGuard Shaver White There was a time when I was living on a camp island just off the San Francisco Bay Area when I couldn't find a convenient way to shave myself clean. While I was on a three-week vacation and thus able to get clean shaves at the US Olympic Swimming Complex in San Jose, the access was ridiculously restricted. To meet my daily needs I had to get a half hour ride to the nearest department store and walk around in a few inches of water, trying to maneuver my head to reach with my face to the miniature white trays of super expensive razors. It was a little gross, but I managed to survive. The smartest solution? Find a way to attach a razor to my back! I bought my first'smart-shave' - it was quite expensive, but it worked. It wasn't comfortable, of course, but it allowed me to shave with ease. Flash forward: Fast-forward to the fall of 2011. While I was on the lengthy waitlist for

For 2019, Gillette introduced another version to the Fusion line: the SkinGuard. Though it uses nearly the same handle as the standard Fusion5 (no FlexBall technology), the blade which Gillette says is designed for sensitive skin is a radical departure. Like the Fusion ProGlide Shield cartridges, SkinGuard cartridges have lubricating strips above and below the blades. But the big difference is that the SkinGuard cartridges contain only two blades. The blades are more widely spaced than even the Mach3s, though they're separated by a pair of ladder-shaped plastic combs. The Fusion ProShield cartridge has a similar mechanism at its bottom, but we've never seen a razor with two of them which are meant to gently guide hair into the blade. All in all, if you do switch to cartridge blades, you'll want to use one of the best ones on the market. The Gillette Mach3 cartridges are pretty good but they're not a world-class razor and they're a lot more expensive than cartridges from the competition. It's a good deal though, as long as you're patient (and don't forget to prep with a mild soap or shave soap) and don't feel overwhelmed by the blades. Though the Fusion5 was a middle choice because the customer service reps were giving the Fusion5 less weight than the Mach3 for our final round of research, the Mach3 provides the best balance of speed, smoothness, and safety. If your legs, face, arms, or neck take a long time to dry out during the course of a shave, or you find yourself face first into a hole, you may want to give the Mach3 a try. The Pulse is the last razor in our lineup. Though not as smooth as the Mach3, it is quick and effective, and the light, soft touch of the handle should encourage the more hesitant to give it a try. 5ec8ef588b
