the Related Art An image forming apparatus using an electrophotographic printing method, which forms an image using an electrophotographic image forming method, includes a photosensitive drum on which an electrostatic latent image is formed, and a developing unit that develops an electrostatic latent image on the photosensitive drum to form a toner image. In the developing unit, a developing roller provided with an elastic layer having high rigidity is used in order to prevent eccentricity of a developing roller that is caused by a contacting force of a developer on the developing roller and a developer carrying property of the developing roller. Conventionally, as the elastic layer having the high rigidity, a resin, such as polyimide, has been used. However, the polyimide requires a processing temperature of about 300° C., and is highly expensive. Further, the polyimide has poor environmental resistance and generates outgas. Therefore, a toner using the polyimide has been examined, for example, in Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2009-226470. Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2009-226470 discloses a toner including a wax, which is applied to the surface of a toner base particle, and a release agent, which is applied to the surface of the wax-containing toner base particle. However, since the above-described resin, such as the polyimide, is mainly used in a toner, cost increases to improve the environmental resistance of the resin.Q: Explain 2-way SSL split I am researching how to test our 2-way ssl site. I am seeing an option to split the SSL keys. I am looking for some clarification on this. I have read multiple explanations of split ssl including this and this. But I have not seen an explanation like the below. 5ec8ef588b
