Brazil and South Africa, and their success has inspired several imitators, some of which are actually the very same bands. The most notable imitators of DJ bands are Inez Foxx, Hello Monday, The Simian Mobile Disco, Telstar and Beyond The Wizard's Sleeve. The DJ band came to the attention of the world as the result of MTV's decision to give a slot for all Swedish music acts to perform in the finals of the Swedish contest Melodifestivalen, a music competition that selects the winner for the Sweden's national selection for the Eurovision Song Contest. At that time, the contest was held for the first time in 1996, and the DJ band participated in the contest, with the song "En dag med dig", which was sung entirely in Swedish, and was made available for download. Since then, the band have released six studio albums and a number of singles, and have enjoyed a stable position on the music charts in Sweden. Released in July 2007, the band's sixth studio album, Ängeln (In English: The Angel) was an experimental album, as it contained a number of covers of well-known songs. A few days before the release of the album, the band announced they would be performing at a major Swedish music festival, Våningsfesten (in English: The Bed Festival) the following year. The album was followed by a tour, which started in November 2007. The band first played on their home ground, on their own record label, Da Bop Records, in the small city of Helsingborg, South Sweden, on 15 December 2007. As part of the tour, they also played at a number of music festivals all over Sweden, including the big one, Våningsfesten 2008. The band performed at the festival on 21 May 2008, with the band's biggest selling album, Sjunger live, playing in the background. That year's Våningsfesten was notable for being the only one in which a CD was handed out with a DJ band's compilation. The band also made their record label official, with the first release on their own Da Bop Records, a greatest hits album named The Best of Da B
