Flag False Flag Cao Junli Author & Master, The Study of War Publisher : Foreword: This document is being revised by Cao Junli, based on various talks and seminars in the past decade, and is presented as a gift to mankind. This textbook was originally written in Mandarin. After nearly 10 years of revision, the 2nd edition is being presented in both Chinese and English. Note: If you read this book in Chinese, you will also find many entries in Chinese. The Chinese text is also revised from time to time. They are usually to correct the grammar or to adjust the Chinese font used in the book. Chapter 1 The Game of False Flags A "False Flag" Operation is a covert operation in which the government or some other group presents an incident that it allegedly caused. This incident is designed to deceive the public, and to draw suspicion toward a particular individual or group. In essence, it is a plot. There are several types of False Flags: 1. Operations against Democracy The first is the strategy of overthrowing democracy. An example of this is the coup that occurred in Beijing, China in 1966. During that time the Communist Party of China, the security agencies of the Ministry of Public Security, and the Red Guards Secret Police were all participating in the coup. Sometimes this strategy is used to make war with a democratic country. For example, the February 26, 1992, Incident (the Gulf War) was preceded by the Cuba incident. At the time, the Soviet Union was still in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, and had no problems with the West. The American government fabricated a lie about the Soviet Union firing on a ship containing a cargo of military equipment for the Cuban government. This "lie" was supported by numerous American media outlets. They pretended that the Soviet Union was supporting Cuba's communist government. This had no basis in fact. The United States of America attacked the Soviet Union with the Soviet Union's consent and support. This attack was a military operation, but it also serves as an example of a political deception. 2. The False Flag Operations Strategy This is a strategy of drawing suspicion to a certain individual or group. It is a false charge that is set up against a certain person or organization, and they are framed for a crime. The purpose is to shake off public sympathy and to silence critics. The strategy for achieving this is as follows: - It is either done by the authorities or is officially denied by the authorities. - It is set up as a "crime" by the authorities. - It is a crime of which someone is arrested and charged. - It is falsely presented as an event that is committed by the person charged. - The role of
