Download .Q: Implementing low-pass filtering for speech recognition I am working on a speech recognition task. In order to ease offline speech recognition, I am implementing the low-pass filtering to the input speech signal. What I am finding is that the filtering of the low-pass filter affects the speech recognition performance. I am doing this because I want to collect raw data by streaming input speech signals and their labels. The speed of the low-pass filter can be set as -8dB or -12dB. How does this affect speech recognition? I understand that 12dB low-pass filter's spectral slope is pretty steep. How does it influence speech recognition? What should be the process for setting the speed of the low-pass filter? A: There are many factors that can change the performance of any speech recognition system. Speech embedding Size of the vocabulary Accuracy of the underlying speech recognition algorithm Feature extraction method Conditions of the microphone Few things you can do to improve recognition accuracy: Use a richer feature representation. Use of Mel filterbank as features. Use higher bit-rate. Use 16-bit Less noise in the environment. Q: Observer design in Joomla I'm new to Joomla and I am wondering what's the best design pattern for observer in Joomla. As we know, we can subscribe to core's events to react to them. 04aeff104c
