Work from our laboratory and others in the field has shown that overexpression of p27 in a variety of tumor cells inhibit cell growth both in vitro and in vivo, and tumor cells which express low levels of p27 are not only tumorigenic but are also metastatic. The gene encoding p27 has been cloned, suggesting that alterations in its expression or activity may have important consequences on a tumor cell's ability to proliferate, grow, and metastasize. To determine if alterations in p27 expression or activity could influence tumor cell growth and metastatic potential, we have developed an immortalized cell line from the strain of p27 null mice. The EC5 immortalized cell line does not express p27 mRNA and protein, and thus is a model of dysregulation of growth control. While we have examined properties of the EC5 cell line in vitro, we propose to examine the role of p27 in tumor growth and metastasis in vivo. We are well suited to study these issues for a variety of reasons: 1) We have developed a stable transfection procedure with adenoviral vectors to introduce human p27 cDNA into the EC5 cell line to produce cell lines which exhibit altered levels of p27 protein. 2) We have transfected the EC5 cell line with a construct which expresses a fusion protein containing herpes simplex virus TK and enhanced green fluorescent protein to produce highly fluorescent cells
