Two Kinds of Kids Two Kinds of Kids is a radio drama featuring characters consisting of two children who talk about their lives. Usually the two children switch lines halfway through the conversation, or talk alternately during the entire conversation. This show premiered in 1975 on WLAO (AM) in Albany, New York. It was moved to KBIG in Los Angeles and later to KQED in San Francisco. In 1980, KQED adapted the show into a prime time TV series called The Land of Two Kids. It was re-run on the new Public Broadcasting Service for six years. The Land of Two Kids: The Land of Two Kids was a television program aired on the PBS stations in the United States from 1980 to 1982. It was a children's educational television program set in the fictional land of Two Kids. From 1980-1981, the program aired on public TV in California, Oregon, and Washington. 1982 season aired on public TV in Oregon, California, and Washington. The two main characters were Ken and Kelly, two children who, for the most part, live in a town on the edge of Two Kids. Each episode of the show would feature two children conversing about various topics. The program used songs as part of the communication between the characters. The show ran for six seasons, and for the first three seasons, it aired on PBS's PBS Kids/PBS Kids Central programming block. On October 10, 1980, it premiered on public television stations in the Pacific Northwest; Portland, Oregon KOPB and Seattle, Washington KPLU. The show also appeared on public TV stations in California, Oregon and Washington.
