The patient was a 49-year-old man who had two episodes of occipital headache and dizziness which lasted three hours. Brain MRI showed bilateral lacunar infarcts and small subcortical infarcts in the occipital lobes. Subsequent CTA revealed diffuse arterial sclerosis, and he was diagnosed with amaurosis fugax. In other reports there are many cases with an unknown cause of bilateral lacunar infarction. We assume this case is different from these by the fact that there is no vascular cause and more frequent recurrence. We also discuss the aetiology of lacunar infarct. (management group) Authors' contributions
