The hypothesis that hippocampal taurine metabolism is altered by a neonatal protein malnutrition was examined. Rats were undernourished by food restriction from 1 to 21 days, after which the diet was made isonitrogenous. At 21 days of age, control and undernourished rats were killed by decapitation and hippocampi were immediately isolated. The brain weights of undernourished rats were reduced by more than 40% compared to control rats, but showed no change in cerebral DNA or protein. Hippocampal malate dehydrogenase (GDH) and taurine levels in cytosol were 60 and 80% lower, respectively, in undernourished rats compared to controls. NADH-linked GDH activity was also lower in undernourished rats compared to controls. Mitochondrial GDH activity was significantly elevated in undernourished rats. Levels of total taurine and taurine-containing phospholipids were severely depleted in undernourished compared to control rats. The results indicate that mitochondrial GDH activity is altered by protein malnutrition and that developing brain taurine levels are decreased.Q: Another turtle question I need to draw a turtle at 45 degrees. So the question is if I know the size and speed of the triangle, can I say that I know the change of position? (in terms of radians) A: Say your turtle is defined by the following turtle script: import turtle def turtle_move(angle): return turtle.Penup() turtle.sety(0) turtle.pendown() turtle.forward(angle) turtle.right(90) turtle.pendown() turtle.forward(angle) turtle.right(90) turtle.sety(0) turtle.pendown() If you wanted to know the turtle position after i.e. 20 seconds of turtle.forward at 45 degrees, you would
